

PANELIST PREP & RUN OF SHOW

Building for Scale: Innovative Growth & Funding Strategies

Roundtable conversation, not presentations. Audience = HUBZone small businesses ready to scale. Arc: access capital → attract investment → team strategically → pursue bigger contracts → scale sustainably. Goal: attendees leave with actionable ideas.

PREP-CALL NOTE: This is the working draft of our July 21 session. On our prep call we'll lock speaking order, confirm each panelist's pillar, and pick the one signature story each of you tells. Bring reactions — what to add, cut, or reframe. No slides; this is a conversation. Your panelist questions are on page 2.

ERIC

— CROSS-PANEL & Q&A BACKUP

- 1. Roundtable: A HUBZone firm has 90 days and limited cash — in what order do they tackle funding, partnerships, and going after bigger work? (let all 3 argue their pillar)
- 2. Roundtable: The most expensive scaling mistake each of you sees in your lane — do they overlap?
- 3. Q&A if quiet: "How did you fund your first big jump?" · "Bootstrap or raise?" · "When am I ready for a prime to take me seriously?" · "Realistic timeline to the next level?"

— PANELIST QUESTIONS

Each panelist owns a pillar. Eric will tee you up by name during the round-robin — answer conversationally and tell stories. The first (orange) question is your opener; the rest are directions Eric may steer.

 SCALING & CAPITAL

Chairman, MCPM Inc. · Built a tech consulting firm to $197M & 800+ consultants (1986–1999) · SBA Entrepreneur of the Year (awarded at the White House)

- 1. Open us up — you built a tech consulting firm from zero in 1986 to $197M by 1999. Take the room back to an inflection point where scale almost broke you.
2. You now lead project finance between $1B–$5B. From that seat, what do most small businesses misunderstand about capital?
3. What did access to capital unlock for you that hustle alone couldn't?
4. You've been on both sides — operator and now investor. What makes you back a company today?
5. Closer: the one discipline a HUBZone firm needs before it's ready to scale.

Calvin J. Mitchell Jr.

 BUYER & PRIME SIDE

Sr. Director, Strategic Acquisition & Engagement, GDIT · Former SES Procurement Executive · NCMA Board Advisor

- 1. Give the room the inside view — you've been a federal SES procurement exec and now sit on the prime side at GDIT. How do big buyers actually decide who's ready for bigger work?
2. Where's the gap between how a small business thinks it's evaluated and how primes/agencies really judge scale-readiness?
3. What makes a prime want to team with — or invest in — a smaller firm?
4. One operational thing a HUBZone firm must have in place before chasing larger, more complex contracts?
5. Closer: the fastest credibility signal a growing firm can build this year.

Joel Adelman

 FUNDING / ACCESS TO CAPITAL

CEO, Encore Funding · Managing Partner, AdCap Growth Partners · CEO, Transcap

- 1. Lead with the Encore story — you've built businesses whose whole job is to be "fuel for growth." What did you see that made you go all-in on funding growing companies?
2. A HUBZone firm just won bigger than they've ever won. What happens to their cash before the government pays — and what are their real options?
3. Why can't most growing contractors just lean on their bank to scale?
4. Receivables finance vs. asset-backed vs. investment capital — how should an owner think about which lever, and when?
5. Closer: when should a business owner talk to a funding partner — at the win, or well before?
